WOODBIDGE TOWNSHIP MEMORIAL MUNICIPAL BUILDING

Dedicated June 14, 1924.

J. K. Jensen, Architect.

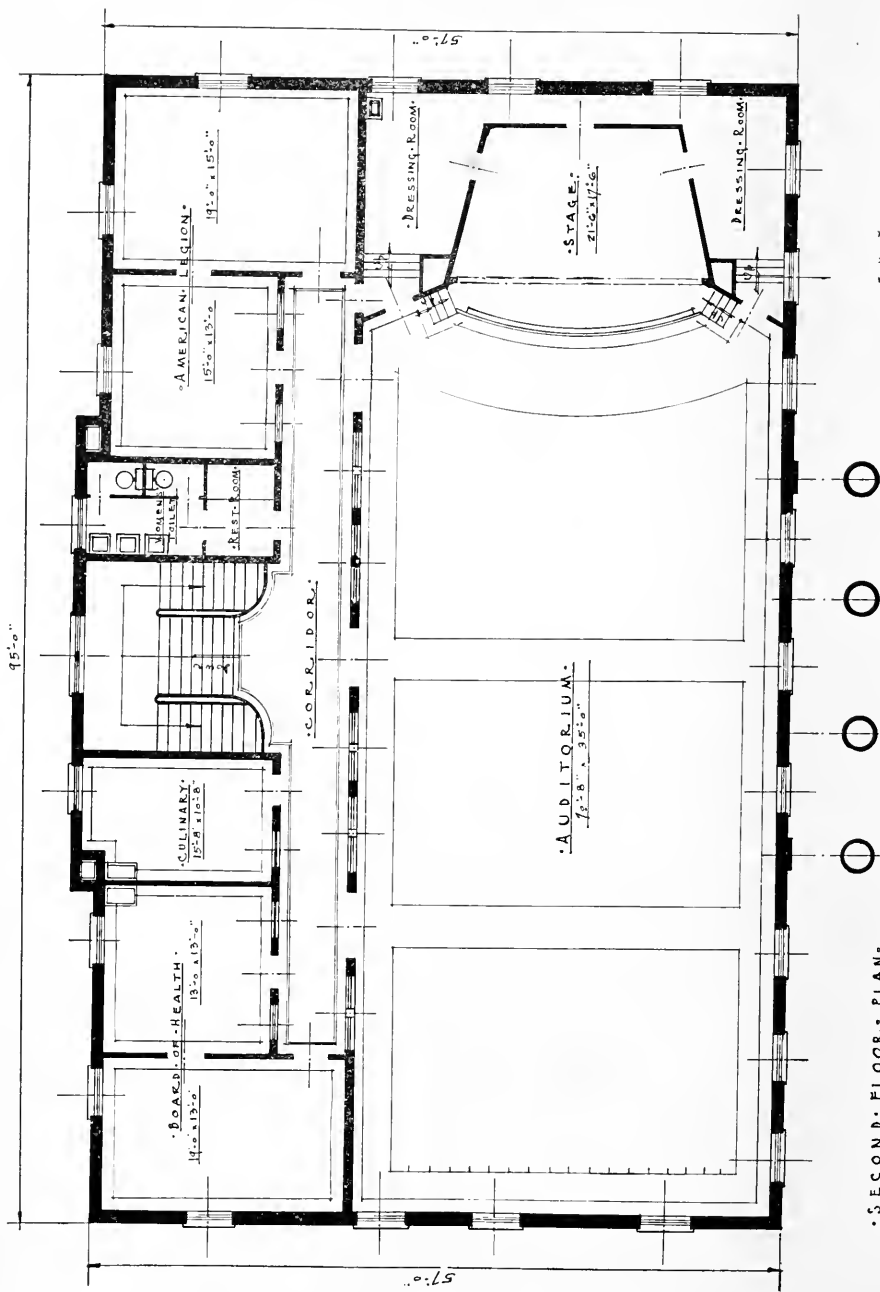

MEMORIAL MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

At the close of the World War, in which Woodbridge Township boys participated in all branches of their country's military and naval service, several of them making the supreme sacrifice, citizens of the township felt that there should be erected some sort of memorial as testimony of the municipality's gratitude. It was felt that this memorial should be of an utilitarian nature and, inasmuch as one of the great needs of the township had for many years been a larger and better appointed municipal building, it was decided to erect such a structure and dedicate it to the memory of the town's hero dead.

Existing State statutes provided that there must be raised by popular subscription a fund of at least $1,000. This was done; eighty-nine citizens making up the amount. A committee was appointed from among representative citizens of the town that was charged with the task of selecting a site, obtaining architects' drawings, and attending to all details pertaining to the erection of the building. This committee was made up of J. E. Breckenridge, chairman; David A. Brown, Gorham L. Boynton, A. A. Overgaard and E. L. Gridley (deceased).

The building, which is dedicated and formally opened today, is being paid for by general taxation. The thousand dollar fund, which was raised in 1919 to start the memorial, will be used to provide some memorial feature in the building, such as a bronze tablet on which will be inscribed the names of township men who served under the country's flag during the trying years of the great conflict.

Besides housing all executive and judicial branches of the township government, two rooms of the building are to be set aside for the use of ex-service men.

HISTORY.

The following history of Woodbridge should be carefully read in order that our own people, as well as our friends, may be familiar with the past and thus better able to judge what the future holds in store for us.

Woodbridge was in the heart of the contested territory in 1776 and is, therefore, rich in its historical facts and traditions. Its Revolutionary fame is kept alive by the many families yet living here who are directly descended from those who played such important parts in the war drama of earlier days.

The spirit which urged our ancestors to fight for the preservation of the Colonies must now be called upon to secure all that is best for our continued growth and upbuilding of material things.

Sometime, somehow, and in some way everything has to be discovered. The very earliest record we have of the discovery of the value of land in this section is the purchase from the Indians on October 28, 1664, by John Bailey, Daniel Denton and Luke Watson; they "made it over" one year later to Governor Carteret and John Ogden, who in 1666 sold to Daniel Pierce and others for 80 pounds sterling, or about $400. The section was named for Rev. John Woodbridge, of Newbury, Mass., and the settlers who came in the latter part of 1665 were a portion of a company of thirty English people who came to New Jersey with Governor Carteret immediately after his commission was given to him by his brother, Sir George Carteret.

The Governor promptly, and with praiseworthy enterprise, published throughout New England the advantageous terms offered to land holders in his province and succeeded in attracting thither a number of families.

Governor Carteret returned to England shortly and came back with other immigrants and with implements and seed for tilling and planting. Vessels arriving in the meantime brought substantial encouragement for the proprietors and the people who came were scattered through the few towns in East Jersey, Woodbridge receiving her share.

The Charter granted by Governor Carteret provided that the Township should have the privilege of choosing its own magistrate and ministers and nominating its own military officers, also that it should have liberty of conscience in religious worship and that in time of war it should combine with other towns against the common foe.

At this time vessels rode at anchor in Woodbridge River, opposite the present location of the Woodbridge Lumber Company property.

The first grist mill was erected by Jonathan Dunham in 1670 on the creek near the first bridge after passing the Presbyterian Church.

Deer, wildcats and wolves were very numerous at this time. The deer were caught in large steel spring traps, but this method proved so dangerous, by reason of the number of men also caught, that it was prohibited by law. Wolves were such a pest that two wolf pits were constructed and maintained by the Township.

The first meeting house was erected in 1707, on land in the vicinity of the present Methodist Church.

The first school teacher was James Fullerton, who received his commission March 3, 1689.

The free school land, consisting of 100 acres, was laid out on December 11, 1701, by Messrs. Bloomfield, Dunham and others, and on January 28, 1714, four trustees were elected to take charge of it, viz.: John Kinsey, James Clarkson, Henry Rolph and Samuel Ayres.

The first printing press was established in 1751, by James Parker, the printer.

In 1757 the records show the names prominent in the government of Woodbridge to have been Edgar, Bloomfield, Inslee, Osborne, Hadden, Noe, Shotwell, Kinsey, Fitz-Randolph, Tappen, Cutter, Freeman, Dunham, Brown and Hampton.

Later, when came the troublous times of the Revolution, feeling in Woodbridge ran high, especially at the news of Lexington and Bunker Hill, and organizations known as the "Sons of Liberty" and "Jersey Blues" were formed as instruments of defense to the common cause of freedom. Practically all of those who had taken prominent part in the affairs of the community were leaders in these organizations.

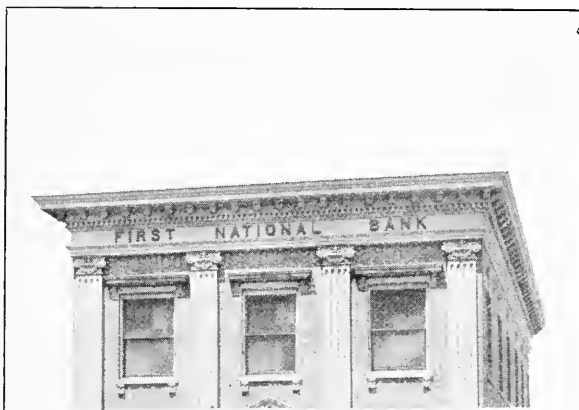

In 1776 Woodbridge was the scene of the greatest excitement; troops were constantly passing and re-passing through the town, and General Heard's Brigade, made up of Woodbridge men, rendered conspicuous service to General Washington at this time. Captain David Edgar received special recommendation for bravery when, with four associates, he captured a sloop carrying provisions to the enemy in Delaware Bay.

Worthy of special mention was Captain "Natty" Randolph, of whose pluck, ingenuity and coolness many stories are told, including many unusual acts of heroism and bravery.

The great development and growth of the original tract from the Rahway River to the Raritan and the Bay since the Revolution is more or less familiar to all.

Our most creditable historical record is but a standard by which we must measure our future progress, bearing always in mind the increased advantages which we now possess because of the wonderful advancement of science and invention since the days when our forefathers accomplished such wonderful things with the very crude tools at their command.

LOCATION

In presenting Woodbridge to the Homeseeker the principal selling points are its accessibility to New York and its prominent location among suburban sections. Woodbridge Township is a part of the Metropolitan District of New York. Technically, it is a part of Greater New York, because it is as near to the New York City Hall as some parts of Greater New York, and while it has the advantages of nearness, its rents and values are on a basis of rural communities.

To those who are hearing the call of the suburbs, who long for the sane life of the country, and who are not familiar with the geographical location of Woodbridge, it may be set forth as lying in the North Eastern Section of New Jersey, directly opposite Staten Island, New York, on the Staten Island Sound, and about twenty-six miles from New York City. We are but seven miles from the county seat at New Brunswick, and it is beyond one's power to imagine a community more favorably located. In no other place in New Jersey are there so many appealing factors that make the homeseeker pause and begin to build, in fancy, the mansion of his dreams.

Woodbridge is taking the opportunity of helping the housing situation and is growing in leaps and bounds. The town has several prominent builders who are erecting a number of houses. During the past year one builder alone completed and sold over 100 homes and is planning to build many more. One other builder completed and sold about 40 houses last year and has foundations laid for many more this summer. Most all of the houses have been sold before completion. Other builders have completed homes ranging in number from three or four to ten and fifteen. Several new developments have been opened up and are fast being improved. There is a large demand for business property at the present time and during the last month several important sites have changed hands.

School facilities are keeping up with the great increase in population, there being 10 grammar schools, and one High School, ranking among the best in the country, as well as a large modern Parochial School.

The fire protection is of the best, there being several fire companies throughout the Township, as will be noted on other pages of this book.

There are churches of every denomination; banks, clubs, library, theatre, three local newspapers, numerous fraternal and social organizations, as well as well-stocked stores to supply the necessities of life.

There is an efficient police force to patrol the streets both day and night.

Taking it all in all, Woodbridge with its charming homes and the community spirit that is unsurpassed, together with its wonderful train service and its accessibility to the prominent resorts, promises to be one of the largest towns on the Eastern Coast of New Jersey within a short time.

That home in the country! To you it may mean a modest little home or a palatial estate. You can find either in Woodbridge. Today Woodbridge faces a period of unprecedented growth. When you buy, buy in a town with a future. To know what Woodbridge Township offers the homeseeker, spend a day or two with us. You'll never leave!

Woodbridge also has its share of industrial enterprises, which furnish employment to hundreds of its townspeople. Because of it being located at the gate of the markets of the world, it possesses every advantage that should appeal to investors, business men and artisans.

Woodbridge compares in health conditions with any section of the East and possesses factory sites lying contiguous to most attractive residential sections where both owners of factories and employes may secure home building sites suited to their necessities.

The highest elevation in the Township is 235 feet, and there are all elevations from that to the sea level to meet the requirements or notions of the most exacting.

TRANSPORTATION.

There is no consideration of more importance to the homeseeker, or to the manufacturer who contemplates a new location, than available transportation facilities.

Woodbridge is fortunate in that it does not have to point to what it is going to be, but can show actually completed and operating facilities now here.

Our five miles of water front on the Sound and the Raritan River, with a twenty-one foot channel to Sandy Hook, is the great foundation on which we build our hopes. It is because of this favorable outlet by water that we have our splendid railroad trunk and branch lines. They were compelled to reach tidewater and of necessity to pass through Woodbridge, over and around our beds of clay. Our natural advantages compel the artificial advantages to follow, and they will surely follow and increase.

Harbor facilities give us the benefit of competitive transportation to all parts of the world, and because of the tidewater railroad connections we are assured from coal famine for all time—a most important item for manufacturers, and one which they fully appreciate.

Our Township is now tapped by four of the greatest railroad systems of the country, whose coal terminals are within a stone's throw of us and whose passenger service carries thousands to and through the heart of Woodbridge Township every day, people who represent every phase of activity and business life in some of our great cities, and people who are constantly looking, in fact searching, for places where industry can be developed with economy and dispatch.

The great Pennsylvania Railroad System and the Central Railroad of New Jersey give us both through freight and through passenger service, while the Lehigh Valley and the Reading Railroad furnish the shipping facilities for many of our largest factories.

In addition to these great arteries of transportation, and connecting with them, is the Woodbridge River, running two miles into the heart of our town.

For trolley service we have the local systems, plus the new fast line from Newark to Trenton and Perth Amboy.
